they

Traditionally,
they refers to
two or more people
that were previously mentioned.

Moe, Curly and Larry are funny.

Moe, Curly and Larry make me laugh.

Now, the power of...

they

Moe, Curly and Larry are funny.

They make me laugh.

they

The teacher likes his students because the students do their homework.

Now, the power of...

they

The teacher likes his students because they do their homework.

they

The parents called because the parents were worried.

Now, the power of...

they

The parents called because they were worried.

they

I like the Simpsons.

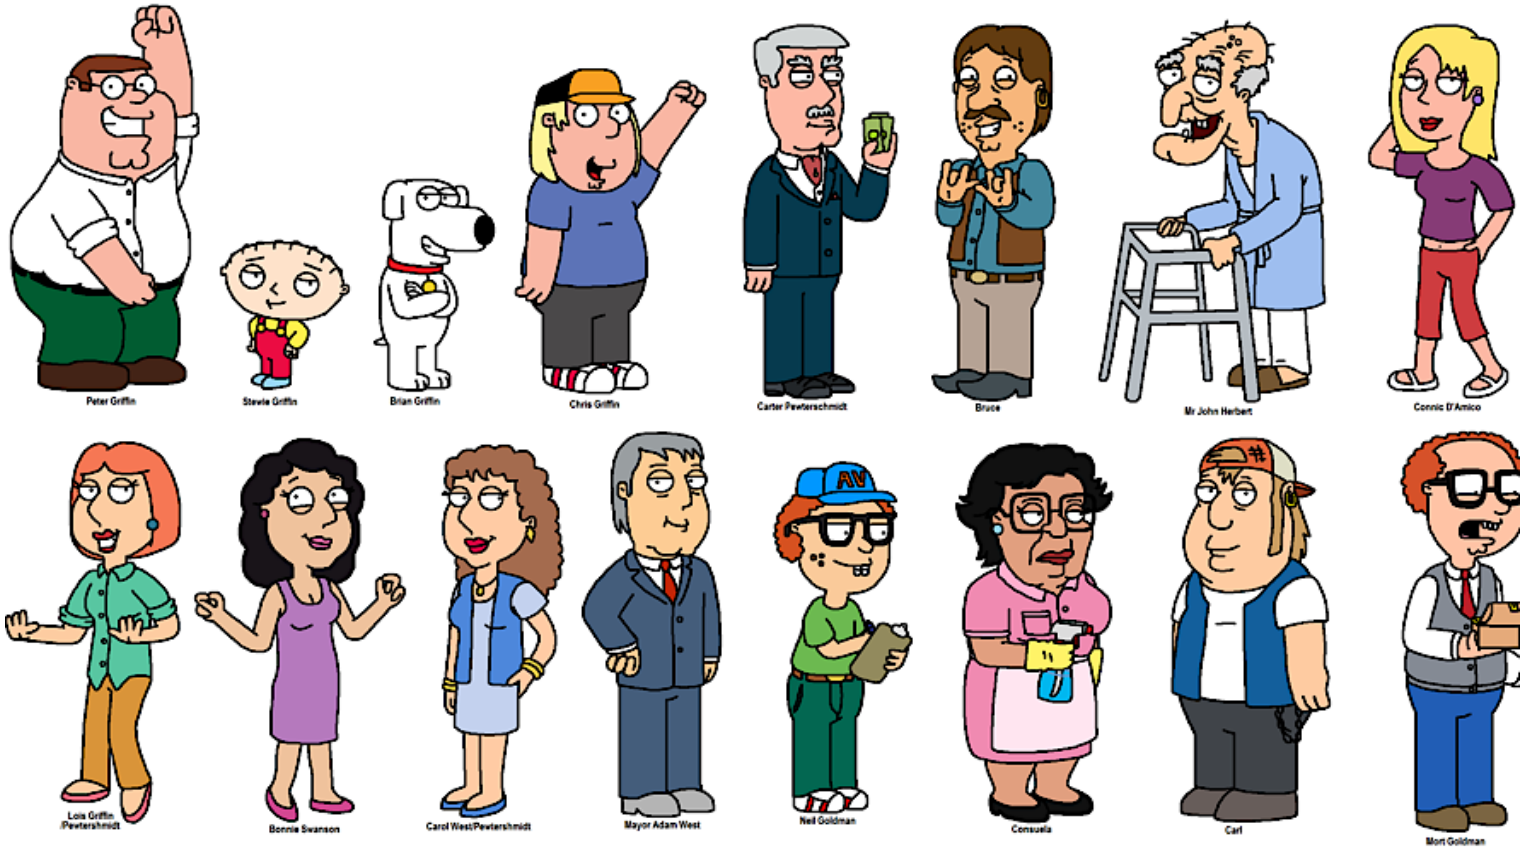
They are funny people.

they

Your turn to create a sentence.

they

I like the Family Guy cast.



they

+

=

They can also refer to the unknown.

"I don't know who put cilantro in my food, but they make me angry!"

“If they can’t repeat it, they didn’t get it.”

GOOD JOB!