"Loss of the Albatross"

A mariner shot an albatross with a crossbow. When the crew sailed, morale (enthusiasm) sank to an all-time low.

Across the stormy water, the ship tossed and turned. Under the scorching (very hot) sun, their skin was burned.

The crew blamed the mariner, "Our boss is responsible for the loss of the albatross. Now he must wear the bird like a cross."

The mariner no longer had a glossy look in his eyes. Just a gross albatross around his neck that is hanging by his side.
