P R E F A C E.

---

MORE than three years ago, having read in President Quincy's "History of Harvard University," that the Reverend Henry Dunster, the first president of this institution, was buried in Cambridge, near the seat of his labors, I was led to look for his grave-stone in our old burying-ground. Though unable to find any inscription to his memory, I soon became interested in conning the old Latin epitaphs, and began to copy and compare them with those contained in Alden's collection, and found much pleasure in thus passing some of my leisure hours. After a considerable number had been copied, it occurred to me that a collection of all the inscriptions might interest other persons, and might be of some use to the biographer and the historian. With this impression, I was encouraged to continue what had been begun only for amusement; and thus the present collection has been made, and is now offered to the public.

The settlement of this town, originally called Newton or the New Town, was begun in 1631. In 1632 was built "the first house for public worship at Newtown, with a bell upon it," and on the 11th of October, 1633, Rev. Thomas Hooker was ordained pastor, and Mr. Samuel Stone, teacher. Early in the year 1636, Mr. Hooker and his congregation removed to Hartford, Conn. "These people and Church of Christ being thus departed from New-towne, the godly people, who came in their roomes, gathered the eleventh Church of Christ, and called to the Office of a Pastor, that gracious sweete Heavenly minded, and soule-ravishing Minister, Mr. Thomas Shepheard." Thus, on the 1st of February, 1636, was formed the first permanent church at Newtown. In 1636<sup>7</sup> an appropriation was made by the General Court for a public school, and in 1638, Rev. John Harvard, of Charlestown, having made a large addition to this appropriation, the School became a College, bearing the name of its benefactor, and the town was called Cambridge.

The first mention in the Town Records of a grave-yard bears date January 4, 1635, when, after various enactments, "It is further ordered that the Burying-place shall be paled in; whereof John Taylcot is to do 2 Rod, Georg Steele 3 Rod and a Gate, Thomas Hosmer 3 Rod, Mathew Allen 1 Rod, and Andrew Warner appointed to get the remainder done at a publick charge and he is to have iii<sup>s</sup>. a Rod."

As late as the year 1702 the grave-yard was leased out as a pasture for sheep, as appears from the following records:—

"At a meeting of the selectmen, 10 March, 1700-1: Leiv<sup>t</sup>. Aaron Bordman requesting that he might have the improvement of the Burying-yard, (to keep sheep in) the selectmen did consent that he should have the improvement of said yard, (for the use above mentioned) for one year next ensuing; provided he would cut the gate of said yard in sunder, and hang the same with suitable hooks and hinges, also fix a stub-post in the ground, and a rail from post to post cross the gates, for them to shut against; all to be done in good workman-like order ; — which the said Bordman promised to do.”

March 31, 1702. “ It was then concluded, that Liev<sup>l</sup>. Aaron Bordman should have the improvement of the Burying-yard for this present year, he paying for the same six shillings.”

In the burying-ground there are several monuments, consisting of a horizontal slab of hard stone, resting upon a foundation of brick or slate. In the upper surfaces of these slabs, are cavities, of various shapes, designed to admit a softer stone, or, perhaps, a leaden tablet, bearing an inscription. Either by the ravages of time, or by some sacrilegious hand, these tablets have been removed, and thus no memorial is left of those whose ashes rest beneath. In several places the foundations of monuments have been found, sunk beneath the surface of the soil.

It is rather surprising, that, in this age of improvement, Cambridge should fall behind her neighbours, and suffer her ancient grave-yard to lie neglected. Interesting as it is from containing within its limits the “ tombs of the prophets,” the spot is often visited by the curious stranger ; but it is to be feared that he as often leaves it with feelings of regret at its desolate appearance.

Many of the tombs are without the names of the owners ; many of the grave-stones have been broken, and more are broken every year ; brambles abound instead of shrubbery ; and what might be a beautiful cemetery is converted into a common passage-way. Unfitting is it, indeed, that the sod beneath which rest the ashes of a Shepard, a Dunster, and a Mitchel, should be rioted over by every vagrant schoolboy.

In the following pages will be found a complete transcript of the epitaphs in the burying-ground, from the earliest date to the year 1800. In the years succeeding 1800, with a few exceptions, the names only of those, to whose memory monuments have been erected, are given.

The arrangement, nearly chronological, is according to New Style, in which, it must be remembered, the number of the year differs by one from that in Old Style, with respect to all dates between the 1st of January and the 25th of March, with which day the year began, according to O. S. For instance, under the year 1663, in this book, is a death purporting to have taken place March 5, 1662; this is probably correct by O. S., as the year 1663 would not commence till March 25th, but, according to New Style, the year 1663 began on the 1st of January preceding.

In several instances the chronological arrangement has been deviated from, to avoid dividing a long epitaph. Such instances occur on pages 70, 113, &c.

With regard to any discrepancies which may appear between the statements in the notes and those in Farmer's excellent "Genealogical Register," I will merely say, that I have, in all cases, followed the original Records of the Church and Town in preference to any other authority.

Beside the Church and Town Records, free use has been made of Farmer's Register, Holmes's Cambridge, Allen's Biographical Dictionary, Quincy's and Peirce's Histories of Harvard University, Thomas's History of Printing, and of several town histories.

I take this opportunity to render my grateful acknowledgments to Rev. Lucius R. Paige, the indefatigable antiquary and matchless Town Clerk of Cambridge, both for his personal advice and assistance, as well as for his kindness in giving me free access to the Records in his possession.

To Mr. W. S. Tiffany, of the Senior Class in Harvard University, I am indebted for the design of the Vassall Monument, which graces my Appendix.

Probable as it is that many errors will be detected in the following pages, it is hoped that such will be regarded with an indulgent eye, and not attributed to any want of care on the part of the author.

CAMBRIDGE, May, 1845.

“Go where the ancient pathway guides,
See where our sires laid down
Their smiling babes, their cherished brides,
The patriarchs of the town;
Hast thou a tear for buried love?
A sigh for transient power?
All that a century left above,
Go, read it in an hour.” — HOLMES.

CATHARINE CHAUNCY

Aged. LXVI Dyed Jan. XXIII

AN<sup>o</sup>Dom MDCLXVII —

The wife of President Chauncy; daughter of Robert Eyre, Esq. of Wiltshire, Eng. We have found, in manuscript, the following epitaph:—

“ Upon y<sup>e</sup> death of y<sup>t</sup> pious Mother in God
M<sup>rs</sup>. Katherine Chauncy, deceased. 24.11.67.

Here lies enterr'd wth in this Shrine
A spirit meeke, a Soule divine,
Endew'd wth grace, & piety,
Excelling in humility:
Preferring Gods commands above
All fine delights, & this Worlds love,
Whilest here she live'd, she tooke delight
In reading, praying day, & night;
In faith she was a Puritan
Daily from selfe to Christ she ran
For aid & help, whilest here she staid:
O This was y<sup>e</sup> sweet, heavenly trade
Of this renowned matron! which Was to all saints a Pattern rich,
Most richly fraught wth grace sublime,
With meekenesse, & wth love divine:
By hope she live'd, in faith she stood Washt from her sins wth X<sup>ts</sup> own blood:
Active, & constant she was here,
In heaven above y<sup>e</sup> palme she weares:
Wth X<sup>t</sup> she reignes, in heaven she sings
Hosannas to her Lord, & King

Death was y<sup>e</sup> key, w<sup>ch</sup> let her out
. . . . .

Pale ghastly death hath sent his shaft
And hath by Chance nigh broke our heart
Deaths volleys sound, sad stormes appeare,
Mourning draws on: Poore Harverd feare,
Least this sad stroke should be a signe
Of suddeine future death to thine.

John Leverett was the grandson of Governor Leverett; he graduated at Harvard College in 1680, and was a tutor in this institution; he was a representative, Speaker of the House, a member of his Majesty's Council, a justice of the Superior Court, and a judge of probate; he was chosen president of Harvard College, and inducted into office Jan. 14, 1708, in which station he remained till his sudden death, May 3, 1724. President Leverett has been represented as a man of vast learning, and true piety. "His talents were eminently practical. He knew better than most men what course to shape in difficult times, and how political and religious factions were to be managed or controlled. In all his official relations, his industry, vigor, and fidelity were conspicuous and exemplary." Rev. N. Appleton, in a funeral discourse occasioned by the death of President Leverett, says, "He was a pillar both of the church and state, an honor and ornament to society, and the glory of New England."

 suaviter obdormiit.

Rev. Edward Wigglesworth, D. D., was son of Rev. Michael and Sibyl Wigglesworth, of Malden, Mass. ; graduated at Harvard College in 1710; unanimously appointed first Hollisian Professor of Divinity, inducted into office Oct. 24, 1722, and died Jan. 16, 1765. Dr. Chauncy, in his "Sketch of Eminent Men in New England," bears witness to his "firmness to his own principles, his charity to those of others, his learning, piety, and usefulness, strength of mind, largeness of understanding, extraordinary talent, catholic spirit and conduct, notwithstanding great temptations to the contrary."

Edward Holyoke, of Boston, graduated at Harvard College 1705, was Tutor from 1712 till 1716, Fellow from 1713 till 1716, chosen President 1737, which office he held till 1769, when he died, deeply lamented as a man and an officer. "Fidelity and uprightness were the prominent features of his character. In duty punctual ; in judgment sound ; in manners urbane ; in his official relations earnest, assiduous, and unremitting, he acquired the confidence of the friends of the seminary, and the esteem of the public ; and his administration was at once the longest and one of the most prosperous in the annals of Harvard College."

John Wadsworth was a native of Duxbury, and his mother was the great-granddaughter of John Alden, who came to N. E. in the Mayflower in 1621. Mr. Wadsworth graduated at Harvard College 1762, was Tutor from 1770 till 1777, and Fellow from 1774 till 1777; he spent much of his time in the study of metaphysics, and in logical discussions, in which his superior powers were universally acknowledged. He died, in 1777, of the small-pox, which was then prevalent in Cambridge; and it is said that he had long anticipated death by that disorder, and was greatly alarmed when his physician told him that he had taken it; he had refused inoculation, through fear of the result. He was greatly lamented by the members of the University; the older ones valued his learning, and the younger ones were attached to him for his mild and courteous deportment.

1797.

In this tomb are deposited,
the remains of

THOMAS LEE Esquire ;
A Native of Great Britain,
but for many years
a citizen of America.

Early formed
to habits of mercantile attention and industry, he pursued commerce with activity and success.

After having acquired,
with the strictest integrity and honor,
an ample fortune,
he retired from the busy scenes of life,
and employed his time, and applied his income,
to useful and rational purposes.

Affability, benevolence, and hospitality, humanity, charity, and beneficence, gained him the friendship and esteem
of all ranks of men ;

While
Conjugal attention and tenderness, filial duty and piety,
fraternal affection and goodness,
gentleness and kindness to domestics, highly endeared his character
to those around him.

Firmly believing and heartily embracing the Religion of the Gospel, he experienced its divine truths,
happily influencing him through life,
inspiring him with patience and resignation,
under great bodily distresses,
and ministering strong consolation and hope in death,
which released him from his sufferings
May XXVI, An. Dom. MDCCXCVII, in the LX year of his age.

To the memory of WENDELL BAYARD DAVIS, a member of the Theological School, Cambridge,
 who died March 8, 1827 :
 Æt. 23 years.

Candour, and Fidelity, Kindness and Benevolence, Humility, Piety and Resignation were united in his character.

His fellow students erect this stone as a token of their esteem and a symbol of his purity ; that lingering friends may here recall his virtues :
 that the silent marble may convey those lessons which his studies were preparing him to enforce.

APPENDIX.

It having been suggested to me, that a table of such deaths as are not contained in the foregoing pages would be useful, and would render this book a more complete record of the early deaths in this town, such a table, compiled from the Town Records, has been given, in the form of an Appendix. Notices have been added of some persons, whose names will be found in this table, but whose monuments have long since crumbled into dust, and of others, whose remains were deposited in tombs, over which no monuments were erected.

In the table of deaths, the first column of figures denotes the day of the month, and the second, the month itself, regarding March as the first month, April the second, &c.

ANDREW BELCHER,

Of Sudbury in 1640, Cambridge 1646, member of the church, was of the Ar. Co. in 1642. He married Elizabeth, daughter of Nicholas Danforth, and had children, Elizabeth, who married Captain Blowers, Jemimah, who married Joseph Sill, Martha, who married Jonathan Remington, Andrew, and Anna, who married a Ballard. Mrs. Elizabeth Belcher died June 26, 1680, aged 62 years.

On the 27.10, 1652, "The Townsmen do grant liberty to Andrew Belcher to sell beer and bread, for entertainment of strangers, and the good of the Town." (Town Records.) We here find the first license for an inn in Cambridge. Nothing remains to designate the last resting-place of Andrew Belcher, but a foot-stone, by the side of that of Mrs. Elizabeth Belcher, bearing the initials, "A. B."

Andrew, the second, was born in Cambridge, Jan. 1, 1647, removed to Boston in 1703, was a captain, one of the Council of Safety in 1689, and a counsellor from 1702 to 1717. He died Oct. 31, 1717, aged 70, leaving one son, Jonathan, who was born in Jan. 1681, graduated at Harvard College in 1699, was governor of Massachusetts and New Hampshire from 1730 to 1741, and governor of New Jersey from 1747 till his death, which took place at Elizabethtown, August 1, 1757.

It appears that Governor Belcher and his cousin, Judge Remington, were ardent friends, so much so, as to desire to be buried in one grave. Judge Remington dying first, his body was committed to the earth. The Governor's remains having been brought here from New Jersey, were deposited in a tomb, constructed a short time before, agreeably to his orders, contiguous to that of Judge Trowbridge; the body of Judge Remington was disinterred, and placed by his side. No further use was made of this tomb for some time; it is now in the possession of Dr. T. L. Jennison, who married a granddaughter of the Governor.

It may be well to observe, that these tombs, viz. that of Governor Belcher, and that of Judge Trowbridge (now known as the Dana tomb), are near the present gateway of the burying-ground. In that of Judge Trowbridge rest the remains of Washington Allston.

ELIJAH CORLET,

“That memorable old school-master in Cambridge,” was the son of Henry Corlet, of London, and was born about 1609. On the 16th of March, 1626, he was admitted to matriculation in Lincoln College, Oxford, being then 17 years of age. He came to New England, and settled at Cambridge as early as 1643, was admitted freeman in 1645, and, with Barbara, his wife, was member of the church in full communion. His children, baptized in Cambridge, were Rebecca, Hepzibah, and Ammi-Ruhamah, who graduated at Harvard College in 1670, was a Fellow of this institution, and died Feb. 1, 1679. He was immediately appointed teacher of the Grammar School in this place, as appears from the following passage in “New England’s First Fruits,” published in 1643: “By the side of the Colledge a faire Grammar Schoole, for the training up of young schollars, and fitting of them for Academical learning, that still as they are judged ripe, they may be received into the Colledge of this Schoole: Master Corlet is the Mr. who hath very well approved himself for his abilities, dexterity, and painfulness in teaching and education of the youths under him.”

Mr. Corlet probably continued master of the Grammar School till his death, which took place Feb. 25, 1686-7, at the age of 78. He was distinguished for his learning and piety. He had the tuition of the Indian scholars, who were intended for the College. Cotton Mather speaks of him as one “from whose education our College and Country has received so many of its worthy men, that he is himself worthy to have his name celebrated in our Church History.” The same author, in a poetical essay on the memory of Ezekiel Cheever, the far-famed Boston schoolmaster, says,

“’T is Corlet’s pains, and Cheever’s, we must own,
That thou, New England, art not Scythia grown.”

STEPHEN DAY,

The first printer in this part of America, was born in London, Eng., and there served his apprenticeship. He came to New England in 1638, for “This yeare the reverend and judicious M. Jos. Glover undertook this long voyage, being able both in person and estate for the work, he provided, for further compleating the Colonies in Church and Common-wealth-work, a Printer.” In March 1639, he began printing at Cambridge, by direction of the magistrates and elders. That Day was the first printer in New England appears from the following record: “Att a General Court held at Boston on the Eighth day of the Eighth moneth 1641. Steeven Day being the first that sett upon printing, is granted three hundred acres of land, where it may be convenient, without prejudice to any town." The first thing printed was "The Freeman's Oath"; the next an almanac, made by William Peirce, mariner; which was succeeded, in 1640, by the Psalms in Metre, "faithfully translated for the Use, Edification and Comfort of the Saints, in public and private, especially in New England." Day was an unskilful printer. About 1648, he was removed from his office, and the press was put into the hands of Samuel Green. Green was probably assisted, at first, by Day, who still remained in Cambridge, and who, being embarrassed by debt, was probably induced to become a journeyman, where he had once been master. On the 28th of February, 1660-1, Steven Day was admitted into fellowship and full communion in the Cambridge church; he died December 22, 1668, aged about 58. Rebecca Day, probably his wife, died October 17, 1658.

HENRY DUNSTER,

The first president of Harvard College, proceeded Bachelor in 1630, at Magdalen College, Cambridge, Eng., where he also received the degree of Master in 1634. He came to New England in 1640, was inducted into the office of President of Harvard College, August 27, 1640, and was admitted freeman in 1641. His wife was Elizabeth, widow of Rev. Jesse or Josse Glover, who died Aug. 23, 1643. Mr. Dunster was highly respected for his learning and piety. The author of "New England's First Fruits" says, "Over the Colledge is Master Dunster placed, as President, a learned conscionable and industrious man, who hath so trained up his pupills in the tongues and arts, and so seasoned them with the principles of divinity and christianity, that we have to our great comfort (and in truth) beyond our hopes, beheld their progresse in learning and godlinesse also." Dunster's services to the College were invaluable; "He found the seminary a school. It rose, under his auspices, to the dignity of a College." But having fallen "into the briers of Antipædobaptism," these services were deemed no longer desirable. "Indicted by the grand jury for disturbing the ordinance of infant baptism in the Cambridge church, convicted by the court, sentenced to a public admonition on lecture day, and laid under bonds for good behaviour, Dunster's martyrdom was consummated by being compelled, in October, 1654, to resign his office of President, and to throw himself on the tender mercies of the General Court." He now went to Scituate, where he spent the remainder of his days. He died Feb. 27, 1659, and, in accordance with his last wishes, "his body was solemnly interred at Cambridge, where he had spent the choice part of his studies and of his life, and might there have continued, if he had been endowed with that wisdom which many others have wanted besides himself, to have kept his singular opinion to himself, when there was little occasion for venting thereof." "He was a modest, humble, charitable man; as true a friend, and as faithful a servant, as this College ever possessed." By his last will he bequeathed legacies to the very persons who had been the cause of his removal from the College, and also nominated President Chauncy and Rev. Mr. Mitchel appraisers of his library, "some of the books of which," he says, "being in such languages, whereof common Englishmen know not one letter."

JOHN FESSENDEN

Came from Kent, in England, settled in Cambridge, was admitted freeman in 1641, was a member of the church, selectman 1656 - 1661, 1663 - 1666, and died Dec. 21, 1666, leaving no children. His wife, Jane, died Jan. 13, 1682, aged 80 years. His relative, Nicholas, came from England and inherited his estate, which was considerable. The foundations of a monument are yet visible near the grave-stone of Nicholas Fessenden, and here, in all probability, were deposited the remains of John Fessenden.

NATHANIEL GOOKIN,

The third son of Major-General Daniel Gookin, and of his first wife, Mary, was born in Cambridge, Oct. 22, 1656, graduated at Harvard College in 1675, and was ordained over the church in this town, as successor of Mr. Oakes, Nov. 15, 1682. He was a Fellow of Harvard College, and died on Sunday, August 7, 1692, in the thirty-fourth year of his age, and the tenth of his ministry. Rev. Dr. Holmes, in his "History of Cambridge," speaking of Mr. Gookin, says, "Tradition informs us that he lies interred in the south-east corner of the burying-ground, beneath a brick monument, covered with a stone slab, the inscription of which is not now legible." Near the monument which covers the remains of Major-General Gookin, and of a similar construction, situated in the southeastern part of the burying-ground, is a monument, covered with a slab, in which is an incision, designed to admit a softer stone, with an inscription, which stone has crumbled to dust. By the side of this monument, stands the grave-stone of Mrs. Hannah, wife of Rev. Nathaniel Gookin. This circumstance seems to evidence, that beneath the aforesaid monument rest the remains of Rev. Mr. Gookin.

SAMUEL GREEN,

Of Cambridge, and of Boston in 1686; was the successor of Day, in the printing establishment, and the ancestor of most of the name in this country, who have devoted themselves to the typographic art. He was the son of Bartholomew Green, of Cambridge, who died before 1658, and whose widow, Elizabeth, a member of the church in full communion, died Oct. 28, 1677, aged 88 years. Samuel Green had children by his first wife, Jane, — who was the daughter of Guy and Justice Bainbridge, and who died Nov. 16, 1657, — Elizabeth, Sarah, Samuel, Joseph, Lydia, and Deborah; by his second wife, Sarah, — daughter of Elder Jonas and Elizabeth Clark, — Jonas, Lydia, and Bartholomew.

Green was a member of the church, "Clarke of the Writts" for Cambridge, town-clerk from 1693 to 1697, and captain of the Cambridge militia for thirty years. For fifty years he had the management of the printing-press, and during this time he seems to have given universal satisfaction; in company with Marmaduke Johnson, who was sent over for this purpose by the corporation for propagating the Gospel, he printed the Indian Bible. Green continued printing till he became aged; he died January 1, 1702, aged 87 years. He was a pious and benevolent man, greatly esteemed by those who knew him. Soon after his death, the printing-press was removed from Cambridge, and probably sold.

ROGER HARLAKENDEN,

Whom Rev. Thomas Shepard styles "my most deare freend, and most precious servant of Jesus Xt," was a lieutenant-colonel, and came from Earl's Colne, in Essex, Eng., in the same ship with Shepard, which arrived at Boston, Oct. 3, 1635. He settled at Cambridge, was admitted freeman in 1636, was elected Assistant from 1636 to 1638, was selectman in Cambridge from 1635 to 1638, and died of the small-pox, Oct. 1638, aged 30, leaving a widow and two daughters.

Johnson, in his "Wonder-working Providence," says: "Among these Troopes of Christ's Souldiers, came at this time, the godly servant of Christ, Mr. Roger Harlackenden, a young Gentleman valiant in Faith, and appointed by Christ to assist his people in this Desart, he was chose to the Office of a Magistrate, as also to be a choise Leader of their Military Forces, which as yet were but in a strange posture; and therefore till the yeare 1644, (at which time the Countrey was really placed in a posture of War, to be in a readinesse at all times) there shall not be any thing spoken concerning their Military Discipline, the continuance of this Souldier of Christ was but short, the Lord taking him to rest with himselfe.

"HARLACKENDEN, among these men of note Christ hath thee seated:
*In warlike way Christ thee array, with zeal, and love well heated.
 As generall belov'd of all, Christ Souldiers honour thee:
 In thy young yeares, courage appeares, and kinde benignity.
 Short are thy days, spēt to his praise, whose Church work thou must aid,
 His work shall bide, silver trade, but thine by death is staid."*

JONATHAN MITCHEL,

The son of Jonathan Mitchel, was born in Yorkshire, Eng., in 1624. He came to this country with his parents in 1635, graduated at Harvard College in 1647, of which institution he was a Fellow and Tutor, and was ordained as the successor of Mr. Shepard, Aug. 21, 1650. He married Margaret, daughter of his predecessor. Mr. Mitchel was " eminent in wisdom, piety, humility, love, self-denial, and of a compassionate and tender heart; surpassing in public spiritedness; a mighty man in prayer, and eminent at standing in the gap; he was zealous for order, and faithful in asserting the truth against all opposers of it."

THOMAS SHEPARD,

Whom Johnson calls " the holy heavenly, sweet-affecting, and soul-ravishing Minister, Pastor of the Church of Christ at Cambridge," was the son of William Shepard, and was born in Towcester, Northamptonshire, Eng., Nov. 5, 1605. He was educated at Emanuel College, where he took his first degree in 1623, and his second in 1627. In July, 1635, he sailed for New England, and arrived at Boston, October 3d of the same year. After the removal of Mr. Hooker and Mr. Stone to Connecticut, he formed a church at Cambridge, and took charge of it Feb. 1, 1636, where he continued till 1649. " This year," says Morton, " Aug. 25, that faithful and eminent servant of Christ Mr. Thomas Shepard died, who was a soul searching Minister of the Gospel, and Pastor of the Church of Christ at Cambridge. By his death not only that Church and people, but also all New England sustained a very great loss; he not only preached the Gospel profitably and very successfully, but also hath left behind him divers worthy works of special use, in reference unto the clearing up the state of the soul to God and man. His Body was honorably buried at Cambridge in New England." Johnson, speaking of Shepard, says, " Thousands of souls have cause to blesse God for him, even at this very day, who are the Seale of his Ministrey, and hee a man of a thousand, indued with abundance of true saving knowledge for himselfe and others, yet his naturall Parts were weake, but spent to the full." He had three wives; 1st, Margaret Touthville, who died in Cambridge (N. E.), in 1636; 2d, Joanna, daughter of Rev. Thomas Hooker, who died April, 1646; and, 3d, Margaret Boradile, whom he married Sept. 8, 1647.

GREGORY STONE,

A deacon of Cambridge church, freeman in 1636, representative in 1638, was one of the proprietors of Watertown, and died Nov. 30, 1672, aged 82 years. Nothing is left to mark his last resting-place but a foot-stone, by the side of that of Elder John Stone, his son, on which may be traced the letters "G. S.," the initials of his name. Near by, may be seen the grave-stone of Deacon John Cooper, the son of Mrs. Gregory Stone by a former husband. Mrs. Gregory Stone (whom, as the widow Cooper, Deacon Stone married in England) died June 24, 1674.

VASSALL.

Above is a representation of the monument over the Vassall tomb in Cambridge burying-ground, containing, probably, the remains of Colonels John and Henry Vassall, and of some of their relatives. It does not bear any inscription; but there are engraven upon it the figures of a vase and the sun, the armorial bearings of the family, assumed, probably, from the similarity in sound of the Latin words vas and sol to the family surname.

The Vassall family is of French origin, and has been traced back in France to the eleventh century. From it descended "the gallant John Vassall, an alderman of London, who, in 1588, at his own expense, fitted out and commanded two ships of war, with which he joined the royal navy to oppose the Spanish Armada." He had two sons, William and Samuel, both of whom were among the original patentees of Massachusetts, in 1628. The former, William Vassall, Esq., first came to New England in 1630 with Governor Winthrop, and, in 1634, settled at Scituate. In 1646 he returned to England, went thence to Barbadoes, where he died in 1655. He left daughters, married in this country. His son, Captain John Vassall, sold his estate at Scituate in 1661, and removed, it is supposed, to the West Indies also.

Samuel, the brother of William, remained in England. He was a merchant in London, an alderman, and, in 1640 and 1641, a member of Parliament. In the year 1766, his great-grandson, Florentius Vassall, of Jamaica, caused a monument to be erected in honor of him, in King's Chapel, Boston. It is recorded thereon that " he was one of the largest subscribers to raise money against the rebels in Ireland ; a steady and undaunted asserter of the liberties of England in 1628 ; the first who boldly refused to submit to the tax of tonnage and poundage, an unconstitutional claim of the Crown, arbitrarily imposed ; for which (to the ruin of his family) his goods were seized, and his person imprisoned by the Star Chamber Court. The Parliament, in July, 1641, voted him £ 10445.12.2 for his damages, and resolved that he should be further considered for his personal sufferings ; but the rage of the times, and the neglect of proper applications since, have left his family only the honor of that vote and resolution."

He had a son John, who purchased large tracts of land in Jamaica, and settled there, having married Anne, the daughter of John Lewis, Esq., an English resident at Genoa. The children of John and Anne Vassall were a son (from whom descended Florentius, the above-named great-grandson of Samuel), who remained in the West Indies, and Leonard, who came here and settled at Quincy.

Major Leonard Vassall married a Miss Gale, and had four sons, Lewis, John, William, and Henry, all of whom, except the last, were graduates of Harvard College, respectively in the years 1728, 1732, and 1733. He had a daughter Susanna, who was married to George Ruggles, Esq. of Cambridge, and another daughter, who became the wife of Lieutenant-Governor Thomas Oliver.

Lewis died at Quincy, Sept. 15, 1743, leaving a son, Lewis, who graduated in 1760, and died abroad, before August, 1785.

Colonel John, the second son of Major Leonard Vassall, lived in Cambridge, where he built two large houses, one, which he gave to his brother Henry, and the other which he occupied himself, and where he died Nov. 27, 1747. His wife was Elizabeth, the daughter of Lieutenant-Governor Spencer Phipps, of Cambridge. They had a son, John, and daughters, Ruth, Elizabeth, and Lucy.

William Vassall, Esq., the third son of Leonard, resided in Boston, and also part of the time in Cambridge, in the house lately occupied by Dr. B. Waterhouse. Mr. G. Whitney states that he was sheriff of Middlesex county. He went to England before the Revolution, and did not return. His son William also left the country for ever in 1772, in company with the son of Governor Hutchinson.

Colonel Henry Vassall, of Cambridge, the youngest son of Major L. Vassall, was married to Miss Penelope Royall, of Boston, in 1741. He lived in the respectable mansion, his brother's gift, now occupied by Samuel Batchelder, Esq. His only child and daughter, Elizabeth, became the wife of Dr. Charles Russell, who went to the West Indies in 1775, and died, a refugee, at Antigua, May 27, 1780. Colonel Henry Vassall died in Cambridge, March 17, 1769.

Major John Vassall, of Cambridge, the son of Colonel John, and grandson of Major L. Vassall, of Quincy, graduated at Harvard College in 1757. He, as well as his father, was an officer in the militia, and held a commission of justice of the peace in the county. He married Elizabeth, the sister of Lieutenant-Governor Thomas Oliver, and had five sons and two daughters ; namely,

John, Spencer Thomas, Thomas Oliver, Robert Oliver, Leonard, Elizabeth, and Mary. The second son, Spencer Thomas Vassal, rose to the rank of Lieutenant-Colonel in the British army, was mortally wounded at the storming of Monte Video, and died Feb. 7, 1807, aged 40. His remains were carried to England, and interred in St. Paul's Church, Bristol, where a monument, designed by Flaxman, and an inscription, partly from the pen of Mrs. Opie, perpetuate the memory of his bravery. Major Vassal, who took a very active part with the Loyalists, was compelled to leave the country, as well as others of the family, all of whom held the same political sentiments. It is said, "His loyalty went so far, that he would not use on his arms the family motto, sæpe pro rege, semper pro republica." He died suddenly at Clifton, near Bath, England, Oct. 2, 1797. Madam Vassall, his widow, also died at Clifton, March 31, 1807. The estates of the family were confiscated, and the noble mansion of Major Vassall, in Cambridge, became, successively, General Washington's head-quarters, the residence of Andrew Cragie, Esq., and of his relict, the late Madam Cragie, of Joseph E. Worcester, Esq., and, lastly, the home of Professor Henry W. Longfellow.

The Vassall family has ever been distinguished for enterprise, magnanimity, and noble bearing. If some of this name were not only often, but always, for their king, it must be admitted that they made as great sacrifices to loyalty, as did their forefathers to liberty.

REV. JOSEPH WILLARD,

The son of Rev. Samuel Willard, was born at Biddeford, Me., Dec. 29, 1738, graduated at Harvard College in 1765, where he was Tutor and Fellow; he was inducted into the Presidency of this institution, Dec. 19, 1781, in which office he remained till his death, Sept. 25, 1804, at the age of 64. His remains were deposited in the College vault, in the southerly part of the burying-ground. In the words of President Quincy, "President Willard was distinguished, as a scholar, for his acquaintance with classical literature, and with mathematical and astronomical science; as a divine, for learning, candor, and catholicism; and, as the head of the University, for a union of paternal kindness with firmness in supporting the laws. His manners were simple and reserved. His deportment dignified, and his character serious and contemplative. Having been called to the President's chair in the midst of the Revolutionary war, when the general tone of morals was weak, and the spirit of discipline enervated, he sustained the authority of his station with consummate steadfastness and prudence. He found the seminary embarrassed; he left it free and prosperous. His influence was uniformly happy, and, throughout his whole connection with the institution, he enjoyed the entire confidence of his associates in the government, the respect of the students, and the undeviating approbation and support of the public."

---

My task is finished. The path of the schoolboy has led him through the neglected spot, among mouldering graves, and moss-covered, leaning stones, where rest many of the wise and good, and where,

“ Each in his narrow cell for ever laid,
The rude forefathers of the hamlet sleep.”

There have been gathered the records of the dead ; once more their forgotten names have been brought to view ; their tale has been briefly told ; and nothing remains but to add, requiescant in pace.
