The IMarEST collection at Lloyd's Register

At the end of June 2011, Lloyd's Register provided a new home for the library collection of the Institute of Marine Engineering, Science and Technology (IMarEST). With the impending move of IMarEST's London headquarters to new offices, the library would have otherwise been stored remotely or split up.

The historical library's new location at 71 Fenchurch Street, London, allows the material, built up by the IMarEST over many years, to be more widely accessed and used by researchers visiting Lloyd's Register's Heritage & Education Centre.

Subject areas include: offshore engineering, ship design, steam turbines, gas turbines, electrical systems, engines, radio/radar, renewable energy, welding, hydrodynamics, hydrogeology, pollution, fishing boats and fisheries, seamanship, salvage, vibration, quality control, ship management, marine engineering, materials, combustion, lubrication, heating/ventilation, pumps and pipes, future ocean technology, naval architecture, fluid mechanics, dredging and marine navigation to name but a few.

Further details on the reference collection, historical research service and other resources available to researchers follow at the end of this information sheet.

Background to the collection:

The IMarEST was established in 1889 and is the largest international membership body and learned society for marine professionals with over 15,000 members worldwide.

The IMarEST collection at Lloyd's Register contains numerous conference proceedings, journal series, rules and registers, technical reports and reference titles.

Resources at Lloyd's Register

Lloyd's Register has also maintained a library since 1852, the first being founded at the bequest of Augustin Bullock Creuze, principal surveyor.

Today both library collections are situated in the Lloyd's Register building at 71 Fenchurch Street, designed by Thomas Colcutt in 1901, where we welcome visits from the general public and professional researchers alike, so that they may carry out their own research free of charge.

The combined on-line library catalogue can be accessed here: <http://www.lr.org/en/research-and-innovation/lr-foundation/historical-information/library-catalogue/library-search.aspx>

Photocopying facilities are available but books cannot be borrowed. The Heritage & Education Centre is committed to ensuring the library continues to stock current titles. Researchers are asked to work with us to highlight the material they require so the collection can continue to be a primary resource that meets reader's needs.

Document delivery is available through Lloyd's Register's main Historical Research Service.

Research Service:

The Heritage & Education Centre has provided an historical enquiry service for a number of years. Please note that this is dependent upon resources and staff availability to complete your request. We encourage people to visit the library in person where possible as they can freely access the material and get a real feel for the information available.

Lloyd's Register Foundation Research Service

In addition to maintaining the library and archive, the Heritage & Education Centre runs a research service for those who prefer not to come in to do the research themselves. We are able to provide information from Lloyd's Register publications, including the Lloyd's Register of Ships, List of Shipowners and Lloyd's Register of Yachts, as well as the reference sources held within the organisation's library, in the IMarEST collection at Lloyd's Register and from RINA's Denny library collection.

There is no charge for our historical research, but it is dependent upon the availability of staff to answer your request and we shall advise you accordingly. If you require current or legal research please contact us for further information.

Once you have decided on the research you require (for example, a full ship history or basic details of a yacht), please complete the order form below, giving as much detail as you can about the concerned vessel(s)/conference or journal titles required.
