A Hired Hero's Life Is Hard!

When I agreed to sail to the little island town of Maramon and to deal with their "monster problem," I thought only of the fame and fortune the job would bring me. I imagined that I'd slay a few orcs and goblins, collect my pay, and sail back to Knessos in triumph with the keys to the city! I didn't expect . . .

Hordes of monsters every night! They swarm into the streets of town, looting and pillaging all the buildings in their sight!

Caverns! I have found that the monsters come from cellars, catacombs and caverns far beneath Maramon. My job will not be completed until I scourge them all!

Money problems! The townsfolk give me free room and board, and I can keep anything I retrieve from the monsters I slay, but the gold for my weapons, armor, magical devices and potent herbs comes from my own pocket!

I had three rivals for this hero's job. If they knew my plight, they would be thanking their lucky stars that they lost the job and stayed in Knessos.
