THE SCENARIO:

In the war that rages across Europe, the summer of '85 saw the Soviet occupation of Norway. Backed by overwhelming armor and firepower, Russian forces had little trouble achieving their objective. But with the onset of winter, their early success may prove to be quite temporary.

With frigid nights freezing the oil in armored vehicles and the harsh terrain impeding daytime movement, the Soviet superiority in armor is effectively negated. NATO now has the opening it needs to launch a counterattack.

THE GAME:

As the NATO commander, you make full use of Nature's gift by deploying a new breed of fighting men: Infantry and mortar infantry on skis. Like darting ghosts, your ski units attack Soviet positions to regain control of towns and airbases.

If you're playing the Soviet general, you must fight fire with fire by fielding your own ski troops to counter the enemy's "guerrilla" tactics. You can also employ artillery bombardment, rocket fire and tactical air strikes to help you turn back this NATO threat.

Like the other games in this exciting wargame series, NORWAY 1985 boasts beautiful color graphic displays, a sophisticated movement system, and realistic combat rules. All of which makes a hypothetical battle come alive on your screen!

During solitaire play, the computer can direct either side.
