WHEN SUPERPOWERS COLLIDE

RDF 1985™

SSI

STRATEGIC SIMULATIONS INC

Master rulebook from "GERMANY 1985" (included inside) is required to play this game.

A HOT STRETCH OF DESERT IN SAUDI ARABIA IS ABOUT TO BE HIT BY A STORMTHE RDF!

The year is 1985. Soviet forces have seized control of an oil-rich area along the Persian Gulf in Saudi Arabia. The U.S. responds by sending its Rapid Deployment Force. The scenario is set for the second game of SSI's modern wargame series: "WHEN SUPERPOWERS COLLIDE."

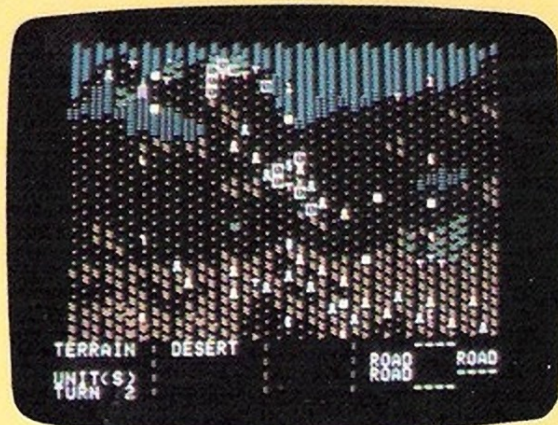

The Rapid Deployment Force rushes to this "hot spot" with paratroopers, marines (with landing craft), mechanized infantry and air support. Their primary targets are the airfields which allow them to build up air superiority and bring in troops and equipment. After the airfields, the RDF must wrest control of towns, cities and oilfields.

"RDF 1985" has the same innovative movement and combat systems that are used in "GERMANY 1985," the first game in this series. Like "GERMANY 1985," the map is on a 28 x 39 hex grid. However, this map includes such terrain features as open desert, oasis, sabkha (salt flats) and the Persian Gulf all displayed in color Hi-Res Graphics.

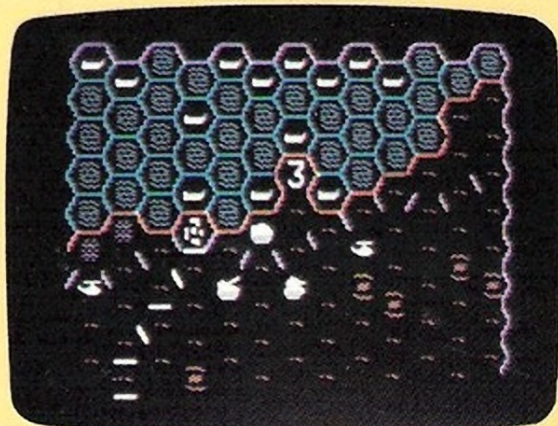

The rules that accompany this game are only a supplement to the "GERMANY 1985" rule book. In order to fully understand this game, you must have a copy of the "GERMANY 1985" rule book (which is the master rule book for the SUPERPOWERS series). After all, you can't fight the second half of a war unless you've already fought the first half.

Whether you storm the desert with the RDF or defend the oil-rich area with Soviet forces, you'll have a great time playing against another player or the computer as you fight a possible future war. Let's just hope that oil's well that ends well.

(With that, we may exile the copy writer to the Persian Gulf.)

Entire map display with Persian Gulf at the top of the screen and six other terrain types including oilfields.

U.S. ships in the Persian Gulf bring artillery and mechanized forces to shore.

Soviet tank battalion retreats from American paratroopers as they secure the airfield.

RDF 1985 and all games in the "WHEN SUPERPOWERS COLLIDE" series are designed by Roger Keating.
