Background

(Extract from a letter to the leader of the Special Operations Squad).
Two months ago during a routine reconnaissance mission one of our planes took a photograph of what appears to be a highly guarded security area. We now have intelligence reports to suggest that there is a vast underground complex beneath this enemy compound. It seems likely that this is the location of their Advanced Weapons Research Centre, the exact whereabouts of which has been a mystery to us for some time now.

We also have had periodic reports on the activities of some of the Research Centre's scientists, and together with other intelligence reports it has led us to be fairly certain that work is now well advanced on the development of a new and highly sophisticated weapons system. It is probable that this system includes a powerful bacteriological virus capable of untold death and disease. Furthermore we believe that the virus will be used in conjunction with a new type of rocket which infers that they must have made tremendous advances in rocket technology—rocket fuels, guidance systems etc.

It is imperative that we get a team in there as soon as possible in order to assess the progress and potential of this project. It may be necessary to destroy this installation.

Please read the attached notes and reports and be prepared to commence the operation in eight days time.

Game Description

'Special Operations' is a graphics adventure wargame which incorporates a number of features not commonly found in adventures.

For example there are 18 different maps in addition to the maps used for resolving skirmishes with enemy patrols.

This adventure wargame has seven different levels of play, each of which has a different objective. Apart from the initial selection of your team this is a full graphics game and is sold with a separate, comprehensive set of playing instructions.

When you have enjoyed this game look out for other Adventuremaster, Adventure games and Warmaster wargames, part of the famous range of Lothlorien software.
