ROLE-PLAY AND ADVENTURE GAME

Gold, treasure, magical powers – or instant death in the labyrinth?

Nobody knows who built the great underground labyrinth called TELENGARD. Some say that the souls that perish there feed some unspeakable demon. Others say that it is a testing ground for wizards and warriors.

Even the most seasoned of fighters sometimes do not return from the nether-most levels of the dungeon. But, like gamblers, even the most successful of adventurers return again and again down into the circular stairways and tomblike corridors of TELENGARD, risking their very lives for gold, treasure and magical powers.

TELENGARD can be played by one player or as a competition between two or more players. Like a deck of cards, there is virtually no limit to the number of ways the game may be played . . . You can compete to see who can advance his character up to level three the fastest, you can "roll" until you get a character with a high special ability for spellcasting or charm, or you can just go to see who can "snarf up" the most gold in a given time.
