

To all you Hearty Travelers:

How much would you pay for a little adventure? Most software publishers seem to believe you are quite willing to shell out $50 or $60 for quality entertainment. But given the frightening amount of piracy present among microcomputer users, I don't believe everyone is quite so willing to make such an investment. Therefore, Kevin and I have agreed (with the obvious backing of Sierra On-Line, Inc.) to risk "The Wrath of Denethenor" in the somewhat vicious fantasy-adventure market at half the typical retail price. These disks are supplied completely free of copy-protection in the hopes that half-price will be enough to deter rampant piracy of our hard work! Hopefully, if this little experiment is successful, Sierra On-Line will be able to provide future software under these "friendlier" conditions.

Thank you for your support. May the dreyx flee in your path...
