

Consonant J

"Jim and Julie"

Jim's mannerisms were exaggerated. Nothing is major with his wife Julie. Everything is minor. Jim was beyond excited when their son graduated nursery school.

Julie told him, "He will probably be an archaeologist one day."

Jim jumped up, "Yes, he will reject the 9 to 5 schedule."

Julie interjected, "Then he will have poor hygiene." Jim said, "Well, his job can be an engineer."

Julie, "Designing a draw bridge will be a real bring down."

Jim joked, "Okay, he can be a magician. I will buy him a pack of jumbo sized cards." Julie replied, "Big deal."
