

Zh Visions of a Vacation

A Caucasian man from Baton Rouge had a trip planned.

He was going to Asia, Malaysia in particular.

There must have been confusion.

He drove out of his garage and sang, “Bon voyage.”

A Haitian man wearing a beige jacket casually stated, “I know this is a special occasion, but you must be suffering from amnesia. First you must fly across the ocean.”

The Haitian man didn’t mean to sabotage the Caucasian man’s dream.

The Caucasian man came to the conclusion his vacation was now an illusion. He went back inside and watched television.