

To is used for direction (towards).

"Let's go to the movies."

Into is used for movement (inside or transformation).

"We walked into the movie theatre."

"The caterpillar changed into a butterfly."

Informally, one can say, "I am really into (like) rock music!"

to      into

Let's walk
_____ school.

to

Let's walk
to school.

to      into

She walked
_____ the room.

into

She walked
into the room.

to      into

We can go
_____ the pool.

to

We can go
to the pool.

to      into

She can dive
_____ the pool.

into

She can dive
into the pool.

to into

Let's go outside _____ play.

to

Let's go outside
to play.

to into

The train went _____ a tunnel.

into

The train went into a tunnel.

to into

Who put fruit
_____ a blender?

into

Who put fruit
into a blender?

to into

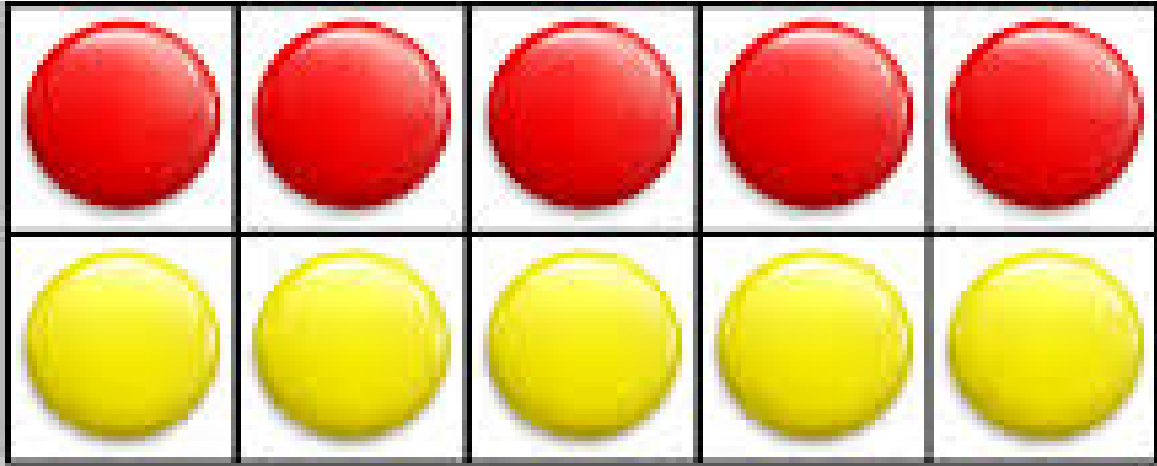

$$5 + 5 = 10$$

---

Five goes
ten twice.

into

$$5 + 5 = 10$$

---

Five goes
into ten twice.

to      into

Cinderella's ride
turned a pumpkin.

into

Cinderella's ride
turned into
a pumpkin.

to      into

We want to check
in            see how you are.

to

We want to check
in to see
how you are.

*Another
thing...*

He dropped in to borrow my book.

*Phrasal verbs
can make this confusing
because the
spoken language blends
in and to together.*

Please
log into/in to
your account.

I prefer log in to your account because
log in is a phrasal verb followed by the preposition (to).

