

Not all adjectives can have a comparative or a superlative (dead/deader/deadest).

One adjective I find interesting is favorite (what one likes the best).

My brother has a favorite hockey team (St. Louis Blues), a favorite baseball team (St. Louis Cardinals), and a favorite football team (Minnesota Vikings).

Among those three favorites, the Vikings are his most favorite.

I feel most favorite is acceptable while I can't think of a sentence where more favorite can be used.
