

"A Committee Commands"

Sight Word #313 committee

A committee had a meeting on why these sight word stories are so bizarre.

A colossal man with cinnamon-colored skin stood and spoke to the members of the committee.

"We must be committed to teaching spelling because there is a big difference between collage and college."

The committee agreed.

They made a commitment (agree to do something) and commanded for all teachers to teach sight words.
